

Snowdon - Mountain of Dreams

John Rowell

Mountain weather is very wild sometimes and is important to have staff on site in case of avalanches or falling off. When you climb the mountain it is important to have warm waterproof clothing and special gear like food and drink, picks, a tent, crampons and a survival bag.

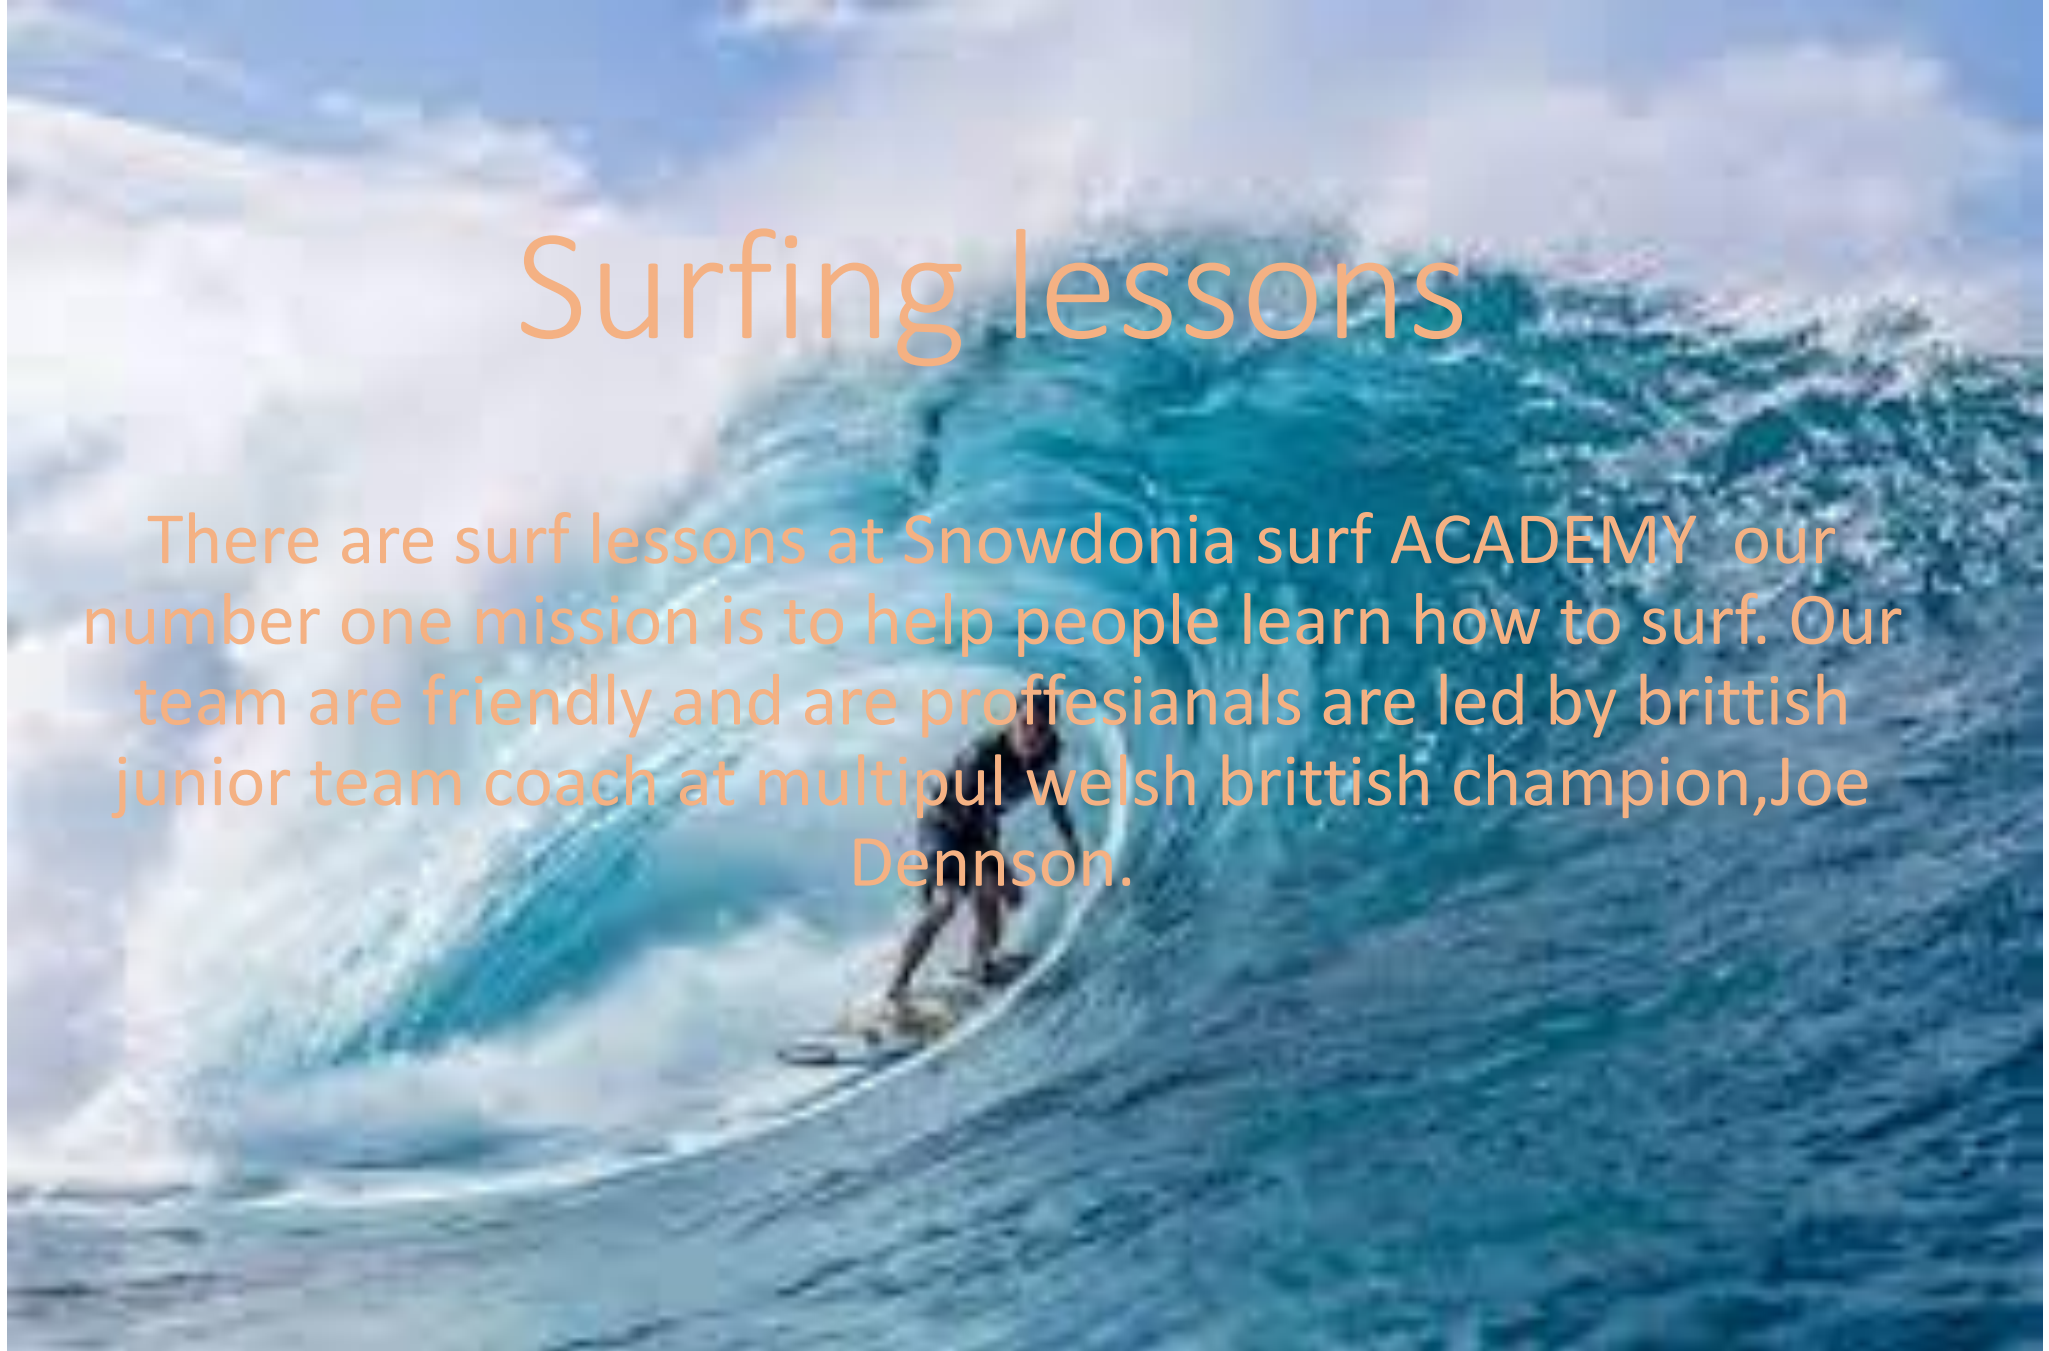

A scenic view of a mountain railway train on a high-altitude track. The train, with a red and white livery, is moving along a track that curves through a grassy, rocky mountain landscape. In the foreground, a large, craggy rock formation dominates the right side. The background shows a vast valley with rolling hills and a small town, all under a blue sky with scattered clouds.

Train trips

In 1896 Snowdon mountain tram road and hotel company limited
Snowdon mountain railway operated almost uninterrupted since its Inception as a commercial tourist railway.
